

About Farm Bureau

The DeKalb County Farm Bureau® is renowned for being the first county Farm Bureau to organize in the state of Illinois in 1912.

Initially the organization set out to help farmers improve their production practices. Today Farm Bureau serves both rural and urban people who are interested in the well-being of agriculture.

The Farm Bureau is a voice for farmers and others who have a vested interest in agriculture. It is the largest farm organization comprising nearly 6,000 member families in DeKalb County, over 386,000 in Illinois and nearly 6 million members throughout the United States.

Farm Bureau's goal is to maintain an organization through which rural and urban people can think, act and work together to strengthen agriculture's role and influence as a vital part of a strong and prosperous economy. It exists to provide programs and services for its membership.
